

GETS TENSPOOT
IN BANDHOUSEO'Brien Is Glued by Grab All
Before He Can Lam.

SPIELING TO GOPE CRACKER

TALE HOW LATTER GLOMMED
LEATHER INTERRUPTED.

One Thomas O'Brien, whose cast of countenance is forbidding, was sentenced to ten days in the city jail Monday afternoon by Judge Diehl on a charge of vagrancy, much to the former's disgust and chagrin. While passing over the Bridge of Signs on the way to his quarters he unbosomed himself to the jailer as follows: "Now what do you think of that? A ten spot in the bandhouse from the back when the worst should have been a jacket. It all comes of the collar seeing me spiel with Jimmy de Face on Commercial street!"

"Who is Jimmy de Face?" inquired the jailer.

"He used to be a gope cracker, but four long stretches in the stir broke his heart and he's a dead one now. Why the last bit he was on the island for glomming a bunny. He's a moll buster too, when he can get a stall. All he wants now is soog and snog. He used to travel on the ratlers but he came into this town on the Jack O'Brien."

"He lost his nerve, did he?" asked the jailer.

"Well, I should say. He was wisening me to his last trick when the collar grabbed me. It seems that Jimmy was stalling a jug in Los Angeles when he sees Mr. Bates with grey whiskers leaving the paying teller's window. Mr. Bates' leather sticks out of his inside kick and Jimmy thinks it's a shame. He cops and lams a couple of blocks. He's weaving it, when he sees grab all across the street leading on a mush with a steamer in his face. Jimmy blows to his kip, but grab all trails. Jimmy ditches the teller and fans a short. Grab all glues him. When frisked Jimmy is found with a rod in his kick and the cases he copped from the leather. He's showed up to the other chowder and two who to him as a gope cracker. Jimmy gets a moult piece and gets off with the back hanking him three times ten and a jacket. Now, Jimmy's no good no more. A few more of the nickel movement and James to the nut collage. Where the crackers will be for him. I ain't got no use for a dead one."

Translation of the Tale.

Mr. O'Brien's tale translated into English is as follows:

"Now what do you think of that? Ten days in the work house from the judge when the worst should have been in order to let me all comes of the collar seeing me talking to Jimmy de Face on Commercial street."

"Who is Jimmy de Face?" inquired the jailer.

"He used to be a safe blower but four long sentences in the penitentiary broke his heart. He is no longer a skilful thief. The last time he did in jail was on Blackwell's island for stealing an overcoat. He is a pick-pocket who robs women when he can get an assistant. All he wants now is food and beer. He used to travel on Pullmans but he came into this town on a freight train."

"He lost his nerve did he?" asked the jailer.

"Well I should say. He was telling me of his last piece of work when the collar grabbed me. It seems that Jimmy was loafing in a bank in Los Angeles when he sees a man with grey whiskers leaving the paying teller's window. The 'easy mark' pick-pocket was protruding from his inside pocket and Jimmy, thinking it a shame, grabbed it and ran two blocks. He was taking the moffy out of it when he saw a detective across the street, leaning on an umbrella with a cigar in his mouth. Jimmy threw the pocketbook away and jumped on a street car. The detective arrested him. When searched Jimmy was found with a revolver in his pocket and the dollars he took from the pocketbook. He was exhibited to the other detectives and two of them recognized him as a safe-blower. Jimmy got a lawyer and got off with the judge giving him thirty days and an order to leave town. Now Jimmy's no good any more. A few more drinks of cheap whiskey and James will go to the insane asylum where the doctors will do for him. I haven't any use for a thief who has lost his cunning."

Glossary of Underworld's Tongue.

Few persons know that the underworld of crime has distinct language by means of which criminals communicate with each other with small chance of anyone who is not of them understanding their conversation. Detectives in the larger cities of the country are more or less familiar with the language, but few of them can use it with the careless freedom of the professional criminal. For the benefit of the uninitiated a glossary composed of the more common words is given. The list is as follows:

Handhouse—workhouse.
Case—A dollar.
Beak—Judge.
Cop—to take.
Caught up—to confess.
Chop—to stop.
Croaker—A doctor.
Cold—Dead.
Cognate—A conductor.
Ditch—to throw away.
Dumny—Bread.
Down Below—Alluding to the penitentiary.
Dick—A sheriff or constable.
Dumny—A money drawer.
Dan—Dynamite.
Duck—to ticket.
Derby—A good bull.
Elbow—A detective.
Fall Money—Money put up for a man in trouble.
Frame Up—to make arrangements for a robbery.
Frisk—to search.
Fan—to catch, as (fan a rattle), i.e. catch a train.
Pug—to stop.
Grab All—a detective.
Glomm—to steal.
Gum—A leg.
Got it All—Life imprisonment.
Gang, Cannon or Dip—A pickpocket.

MARRIED ANOTHER GIRL
C. A. Inlow Is Sued By Hense
Lillian Stinman For Breach of Promise.

For trifling with the affections of Lillian Stinman, C. A. Inlow, a mail carrier, who was in lover's trouble about six months ago, is sued by her for $5,000 for breach of promise. During July, 1901, Miss Stinman says that Inlow asked her to marry him, to which she agreed. October of the next year was set for the wedding. A short time before the trousseau was finished, the young woman alleges that her affianced asked her to postpone the wedding until the next summer, to which she consented. It was arranged to have a June wedding this time. As the time for the marriage approached, the complaint, again asked for a postponement.

March 3 of the present year Inlow married another woman, Hattie Ireland, placing him in such a position that he cannot keep his promise to marry Miss Stinman. Hence she brings her action, although, she says, she has remained single since July, 1901, expecting to marry him.

Inlow's first wife sued him for divorce and was granted a decree. He married again, Hattie Ireland, and she, second choice. She left him promptly and threatened him with arrest on a charge of bigamy. Now comes this charge.

Court Notes.

Judgment was rendered by Judge Lewis yesterday by stipulation in the sum of $407.47 in the damage suit of Eljio Kosenovic against the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad Company. Action was brought to recover $15,000 damages for being injured March 3 while employed as a laborer by the railroad company, about fifty miles west of Caliente. He was on a train which had stopped and sent back no signal to warn any oncoming train. Kosenovic was thrown from the car and his leg was run over, crushing and breaking it.

Jenta Smith Melton has commenced divorce proceedings against Harry Elwood Melton on the ground of neglect for the fitting of his wife. The couple were married June 26, 1905, and have one daughter, whose custody the mother desires. She also asks for $50 permanent alimony, payable at the rate of $5 a month.

William Partridge has commenced suit for $5,000 personal damages against the Utah Light & Railway Company for injuries sustained April 25 on South Street and Third South. Partridge alleges that while boarding a southbound car the motorman started the car suddenly, throwing him violently against the iron gate on the front platform and breaking his arm, incapacitating him for work for five months.

To recover $350 with interest from Aug. 12, the balance due on a contract, Charles Watkins and William Holmes have commenced suit against Renaldo S. Brock and wife, the Utah Loan & Building association and M. A. Brew. Last June Brock contracted with Watkins and Holmes to build for him a foundation for a house for the sum of $350. The work was commenced June 15 and finished Aug. 12, but has not been paid for. A mechanic's lien was recorded on the premises to secure the payment a few days ago. The loan association holds a mortgage lien on the property, as does also the First National Bank. In order to secure payment on a judgment entered Oct. 24, 1904, for $380, George H. Snelgrove has commenced suit against Edwin S. Snelgrove and wife. Only $11 was paid on the judgment, which, with interest, now amounts to $1,411.03.

J. H. Bailey, Jr., administrator of the estate of the late William W. Foster, has commenced suit against Ephraim Foster to quiet title to 324.80 feet in the southeast corner of lot 6, block 65, plat A.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To Business Firms and Professional Men.

Sirs: The course we give in law is adapted to the needs of general bookkeepers, office help, stenographers, assistants in law offices, banks and other firms. The instruction covers Elementary Commercial Law, followed by Contracts, Sales, Bills and Notes, and Real Property. Each is a half-year course, and Commercial Law is repeated in the Night School. In our office or actual business we give: Bookkeeping—thorough, systematic, fascinating; Penmanship—plain, rapid, businesslike; Shorthand—easy, progressive, complete; Typewriting—automatic, perfect; Telegraphy—modern, scientific; Rapid Calculations—direct, accurate; Business Correspondence—brief, polite; Grammar, Punctuation and Spelling—simplified, practical, useful.

Should any of your assistants require training in these lines, there is nothing better given in the west. Write for catalog, or call and see the work, methods and facilities of the commercial school in this region, occupying three entire floors of one of the L. D. S. University buildings.

Provo Teachers Ask For Meeting in Los Angeles.

A. C. Nelson, state superintendent of public instruction, yesterday received a letter from the public school teachers of Provo asking that the next meeting of the State Teachers' association be held in Los Angeles. Superintendent Nelson answered that it had been decided two months ago to hold the gathering in Salt Lake Jan. 3, 4 and 5, and it is too late now to change it. He intimated that perhaps in 1905 the session might be held in Los Angeles, but could not promise anything definite.

WOMEN'S CLUBS
OUT IN FORCEState Federation Gathers in Logan Today.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL SESSION

MANY GOOD FEATURES ON THE PROGRAMME.

Club women from Mantl, on the south, to the extreme northern end of the state, are making preparations for the eleventh annual convention of the state federation which will be held in Logan, beginning tomorrow. The Salt Lake delegation, consisting of over twenty women, will leave on the evening south and will join them en route. The past session will join them en route. The past session will join them en route. The past session will join them en route.

The same general policy which has governed the federation in the past will be followed doubtless during the coming year. Among the more important matters to be considered in line with the work already followed are the free traveling library, the club extension movement, the work of the reciprocity bureau, the plans of the art committee, the results of the literary movement and the progress of the industrial education committee. Reports from the chairmen of each of these will be given, and reports from the delegates of the biennial held last May in St. Louis. Besides these there are a number of papers of high literary merit to be read, four of which are by Salt Lake women. Altogether the programme promises to be one of the most interesting in the history of the Utah federation.

The state federation today consists of twenty-six individual clubs, representing nearly 1,000 women in various parts of the state. Its meetings are held annually, with elections biennially. Its various standing committees work through the various clubs, and its club extension committee devotes its efforts to the organizing and federating of new clubs.

The state officers for the present year are Mrs. Cleson S. Kinney, president; Mrs. E. E. Corfman of Provo, vice president; Mrs. Edward Bichsel of Ogden and Mrs. A. J. Gorham of Salt Lake, recording and corresponding secretaries; Mrs. L. A. Ostlen of Logan, treasurer; Mrs. C. M. Wilson of Park City, auditor, and Mrs. Halbert S. Kerr of Mantl, state organizer.

Many From Salt Lake.

The Salt Lake delegation will leave on this evening's train, and besides the president, Mrs. Kinney, Mrs. A. J. Gorham, Mrs. John Cain, Mrs. Joel L. Priest, Mrs. F. D. Rickford and Mrs. Jessup will go from the Ladies' Literary club. The Reviewers' club will be represented by its president, Mrs. E. C. Lea. Miss Emeline Wells, president of the Cleofan, and Mrs. Selden I. Clawson will be the representatives of that club. Mrs. Howard S. Stowe, president; Mrs. V. H. Penae, Mrs. William H. Jones, Mrs. A. J. Johnson all go from the Woman's club. The P. E. O. society will be well represented. Mrs. McMahon, Mrs. James F. Marshall, Mrs. L. E. Treveland and Mrs. Gorman, the president all representing that club. Mrs. W. W. Riter and Mrs. Crismon will represent the Authors', while the Utah Woman's Press club will be represented by Mrs. Lucy A. Clark, Mrs. Maria Francis and Mrs. Mary S. Kelly. Mrs. J. C. McLain goes for the Home Protective league, and Mrs. Emma Mooney for the Council of Jewish Women. The opening meeting will be held tomorrow morning at 9:30 at the college building.
